Every wrong answer on the NCE belongs to someone. Learn who, and the right answer is the only one left standing.

FROM 'HOW I PASSED'

I stopped trying to memorize everything and started pairing each term with the theory that owns it. On the exam, the wrong answers are rarely nonsense. They are real counseling terms that belong to a different theory. If you know who owns what, you can see the trap before you step in it.

If you are a nervous tester who has been putting this off, I wrote this for you.

— KekeTheLPC

- The Ownership Method — a four-step item routine and 22 chapters of term-to-owner tables, swap-pair drills, and quick checks that name the owner of every wrong option
- What the exam rewards — and what it punishes — in every chapter, with the reason why
- Three full-length practice exams — 600 questions, 200 per exam, each keyed with an Ownership Map and a pair to learn
- Workbook and back matter — an 8-week plan weighted like the exam, flash pairs, an error log, a 380-pair master index, and a 245-term glossary
